

Diabetes and Insulin Pump Therapy

Do you want to learn about insulin pump therapy in diabetes?

Do you already have an understanding, but want to learn more and gain a formal qualification?

Do you come into contact with people with diabetes using insulin pump therapy and want to gain further knowledge of this technology, without necessarily undertaking a formal assessment?

If you answered yes to any of these questions, this is the right course for you.

In September 2010 a new diabetes course will be launched entitled Diabetes and Insulin Pump Therapy (Continuous Subcutaneous Insulin Infusion), which can be studied on its own or as part of a Degree or Masters Programme. The course uses innovative, personalised, teaching methods to ensure that it meets your needs while make learning fun.

Available at: Degree (SCQF level 9), Masters (SCQF level 11) and for CPD purposes via attendance at three study days.

- The next CPD study days are: 7th September, 8th September & 27th October 2010.

For further information please contact:

Jacqui Charlton (lecturer/practitioner in diabetes)
j.charlton@napier.ac.uk

or

Liz Mackay (DSN/Lothian lead insulin pump nurse)
liz.mackay@luht.scot.nhs.uk.

